

Critical Acclaim for *Ubuntu

Sheila D. Collins, one of the most prolific--and progressive--authors of her generation, has just gifted us with her latest work, a biography of the anti-apartheid activist, George Houser. Deftly written and passionately argued, this is the definitive account of one of the most important U.S. activists of the latter part of the 20th Century.

Gerald Horne, Moores Professor of History & African American Studies, University of Houston. Author *From the Barrel of a Gun: The U.S. and the War Against Zimbabwe, 1965-1980; White Supremacy Confronted: U.S. Imperialism & Anticommunism vs. the Liberation of Southern Africa, from Rhodes to Mandela.

“Ubuntu” will inspire you to follow your social justice conscience and act. George Houser spent his life acting for and with people whose voices had been muted by oppression. He challenged unjust wars, racial segregation in the United States, and colonialism across the globe and, especially, in Africa. For me he will be best be remembered for fighting apartheid. I was lucky to join him in the latter years of the struggle and to stand together on the steps of the Union Buildings in Pretoria at Nelson Mandela’s inauguration. George Houser is nothing short of a hero. His story has been brilliantly told by Sheila Collins and is a must read for anyone seeking inspiration that anything and everything is possible.

Richard Lapchick, Director, Institute for Diversity and Ethics in Sport; President, The Institute for Sport and Social Justice, University of Central Florida